Introduction The management of hyperthyroidism and hypothyroidism is primarily carried out in primary care and GPs need to be competent in the management of thyroid and adrenal emergencies. A number of other endocrine disorders may also be encountered in day to day General Practice that GPs need to be able to recognise and manage.

Objectives

1. To know how to manage different endocrine disorders in primary care
2. To be updated on latest evidence based management of endocrine disorders
3. To be aware of when to refer and how to make best use of local resources in relation to endocrine disorders
